A definition of news, attributed by some to Charles A. Dana, famous New York Sun editor, seems in its preservation to defy time: "When a dog bites a man that is not news, but when a man bites a dog that is news."

The description might be associated. too, with the incident of a government credit inspector who wouldn't lend an ear to what an enraged Georgia farmer had to say. So the farmer bit off one of the inspector's ears. In court he got no credit for it.

This episode gives rise to another definition of news: "When a dog bites a dog that is not news, but when a man bites a man that is news."

We're inclined to disagree somewhat with Dana's definition that when a dog bites a man that is not news. He probably expounded the theory without consideration of the dog bites causing rabies which without proper treatment result in horrible deaths.

These days dog bites get publicity especially when the animal disappears and a search is instituted to find and test it for rabies infection. Most household pets are given regular annual rabies' shots for protection of themselves and humans. There are, however, too many pet owners who disregard this obligation and no doubt contribute to the spread of the disease and the frequent harm it brings to human beings.

Children and postmen seem to be most frequent victims of dog-bites. The St. Joseph Gazette reports that 16 postmen were bitten in the past two months whereas there were only 26 cases the preceding year.

Postmaster Maurice Hogan says that there have been four dog-bite cases this year, none serious to postmen, but that several patrons have been warned about their vicious dogs making passes at the postmen's legs.

If August remains as hot as usual, likely there will be many more dog-bites than usual. The kind of weather we have been having contributes to dog as well as human irritations.

Children should be warned to restrain their fondling of old Tige else he snaps a cheek or finger. Parents who have disregarded the serious potential of rabies should have their animal inoculated. Without knowledge of the family, a household pet could be bitten by an infected dog and become a carrier of the dread disease, thus transmitting it

So far our area has been fortunate in the few serious dog-bite cases the past year. Available and effective medical treatment is a bulwark. But there's no use forcing our luck against a possible epidemic of rabies when preventive shots at a nominal fee can be obtained for those animals closely associated with human beings.

St. Joseph, with the cooperation of veterinarians, this year initiated a practice of getting dogs inoculated. Several clinics were set up to which pets were brought so they could get shots on an assembly line basis.

Sedalia might borrow the St. Joseph plan, It would strengthen the modified definition of news that when a dog bites a man it is not news, because the dog didn't have the rabies

Drought Relief Favors Election Year

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON-If you want to see how pohtics is played by Secretary Benson and his boys regarding drought relief, take a look at the official figures issued by the Department of Agriculture. They show that in election years relief to the drought-stricken states zoomed way up. In non-election years, drought relief dropped way down.

Here are the figures: In 1954, a congressional election year, the feed program to disaster areas was 58,221,373 hundredweight of feed. The hay program cost the Treasury $9,900,000

Next year, 1955, was a non-election year. Benson's boys apparently weren't too much worried about drought. In that year the feed program dropped from 58,000,000 cwt. to only 15,-101,790 cwt. of feed. The hay program dropped from almost $10,000,000 to only $100,000.

The next year, 1956, however, was the big election year to put Ike back in office. In that year, the feed program zoomed way up again, even higher than in the last election year. It topped 70,780,961 cwt. of feed. The hay program doubled 1954 with a total of $18,944,500.

But that wasn't all. There was discrimination between certain states which were for Ike and those not for Ike. Senator Symington, Democrat of Missouri, has pointed out that, although Missouri suffered probably more than any other state from the drought, it failed to get drought relief. There was little difference between Missouri and Kansas, as far as the drought was concerned, but a great deal of difference politi-

Just across the border in Kansas they voted for Eisenhower. East of the border in Missouri they voted for Adlai Stevenson. Missouri was the only middle west state which voted for Stevenson and which also has two Democratic

It happened that two governors of Missouri applied for drought relief, one a Republican, the other a Democrat, but Missouri was not put on the disaster list of states. Kansas was, but Missouri wasn't. Sometimes politics pays. Bigotry Doesn't Pay

In the closing days of last year's Colorado race between ex-Gov. Dan Thornton, close friend of President Eisenhower, and ex-Congressman John Carroll for the Senate, an anonymous campaign circular appeared in Denver attacking Catholic candidates on the Democratic ticket, including Carroll who is a Protestant but married to a Catholic

U.S. Attorney Donald E. Kelley issued a warrant for the arrest of Clarence W. Stafford, former Republican city councilman and close friend of Dan Thornton's. Stafford was arraigned the day before election and charged with violat-

On election day the literature boomeranged. Three out of the four candidates attacked in the circular were elected. Dan Thornton, who never lost a state-wide race before, was defeated by Carroll by a margin of 3,000 votes-a defeat that gave the Democrats control of the Senate, 49 to 47.

Backstage Barter

It's amazing how far the natural gas congressmen will go to barter votes for the gas bill. The backstage dealing has already begun.

Congressman Oren Harris of Arkansas, who is determined to ram the bill through Congress, has devised a neat piece of bait for southeast congressmen. They are anxious to pass a littlenoticed textile bill which would duplicate the wool products labeling act of 1939 by requiring the contents of cotton and synthetic fabrics to be identified in labels and advertising. Thus would also require "reprocessed" cotton to be clearly marked when used a second time in clothing and other products.

The textile bill was written by Rep. Frank Smith of Mississippi, who figures it will boost sales of cotton fiber and fabrics. Smith has let it be known that if Harris of Arkansas will give a push to the textile bill, southern congressmen may push Harris's natural gas bill.

Navy Intelligence

The United States wants to keep the smart boys in the armed forces. A new directive has gone out from Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson that the manpower in the armed forces must be reduced. Navy Secretary Thomas S. Gates, Jr. therefore told his Navy commanders to cut 15,900 from its rolls by next January. The basis of the cutting will be discharging enlisted men whose intelligence standard scores were less than 42 on the Navy's general classification test. The highest possible score is 77 and the Navy average is 48.9.

So if the sailors are really dumb or just pretend to be there is a chance of a discharge within the next six months.

Sugared Arithmetic

In some of the college workshops where newer methods of education are offered to teachers at tending summer school and taking refresher courses, one of the latest is in teaching arithmetic. Some of the props used are dials that look as if they are taken from a modern telephone except that instead of the local number. any number up to ten is used and the multiplication tables are learned by dialing

This method is a game, but one cannot escape the fact that the multiplication tables must be learned. The new methods can tickle the imagination but they are no substitute for the actual memory process

Any aid that will make the three R's more appealing is good psychology

Basic fundamentals must still be learned no matter how well they are sugar-coated.

It's on his tactical performance as party leader that Ike is criticized most. But then Ike began to back off. Finally, in the conference to reconcile differences in the House and Senate versions of the defense appropriations bill. Ike's subordinates agreed in writing that $41 billion wasn't needed

From the viewpoint of the Senator or Congressman who went to bat for the $41 billion defense item this was an embarrassing admis-It made them look foolish.

And they resent that above all. If this had been the only retreat. Ike's prestige on the Hill wouldn't be slipping the way it is. But retreat has been the pattern. The school bill lost by five votes in the House. No one doubts Ike have approved probably would included such an amendment, it probably would have been defeated in the Senate. (Which was why Ike opposed the amendment in the first place.) But even so, it would have been sound politics for Ike to have helped push the bill through

> IT WAS SUNDAY morning, the one day of the week the woman didn't have to get up early. She woke up, looked at the electric clock on her dresser and was disgusted to see that it was only 6 o'clock. Here she was, wide awake, and it was just a little bit later than her usual time to get up. The morning before she had wanted to sleep so much and had to get up, this morning she could sleep and didn't.

About a half hour later, her mother, who sleeps in another room, called in to her and asked what time it was.

"It's only 6:30," she replied. "My clock says 9;30," the mother said, and whether it was 6:30 or 9:30 they were awake, so they got up and dressed. The first thing they did when they got downstairs was to check with the clock down there and the mother's clock was right. The mother was provoked to think she had slept so late.

The daughter, however, had a different feeling-maybe it was a little late but she thought it was better than missing that extra sleep she thought she had missed on Sunday morning. No wonder she was so wide awake!-H.L.

Emotions Seem the Basic Producer of Stuttering

Since it is believed that more than one person in 100 has trouble with stuttering, it is not surprising accepted by many of those who that a number of questions on this subject are sent to this column.

not always so.

She has a friend, she says, who has had a tendency toward stuttering since childhood.

'During the war," she writes, "the person concerned was rescued from a bombed ship after having spent several hours in the icy ocean. Since then he stutters to such an extent that it is difficult to understand him.'

This is an unusual example of the common effect which emotions have on stuttering.

There are some differences of opinion about the causes of this speech difficulty. It has proved impossible to find any direct physical cause—that is a localized brain or nerve tissue injury-except in

I am not sure that everyfrom M. M. brings out that it is one accepts this view, either. However, there is no doubt that the emotions do play a large part in stuttering. Everyone who comes in contact with this problem notices the greater difficulty in speaking which a stutterer has under circumstances of emotional

What can or should be done for the victim of stuttering? First and foremost, I think, is the recognition that this will not simply be "outgrown" and therefore the earlier proper attention is given to it the better chances of improvement. Also, much has been learned about stuttering in the last few years, so that better treatment for it can be given.

This involves seeking expert advice through a speech and hearing center of which there are now a considerable number around the country. Information on where these are located can be obtained from the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults, 11 South LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

Another thing which can be done is for parents and teachers who subject can be obtained from a booklet on stuttering prepared with the advice and guidance of the American Speech and Hearing Assn, and distributed through the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults.

There are also several books on the subject, including one by Dr. Domincik Barbara, published by Julian Press, and one called "Understanding Stuttering" by A. B. Gottlober.

A water-spotted dress can be most disturbing to the wearer. This is particularly true when perspiration not only moistens but causes a stained area under neath the arm, across the back or around the waistline. The bestiressed, well-groomed woman can ook unsightly when this occurs!
We learn from THE NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF DRYCLEANING hat water spots are more pronounced on some fabrics than on others. For example, many crepe fabrics are treated or sized in the textile mill with a water-soluble gum. When water comes in contact with the fabric during wear, the sizing has a tendency to pile up around the outer edge of the wet area and leave a heavy deposit in the form of a ring. posit in the form of a ring. Frequently it is easy to identify this type of fabric. Put several drops of water on an unexposed seam and allow it to dry. Scratch the stained area with your finger-nail. The ring will disappear for a short time. However, when the fabric absorbs moisture from the air again, the ring will be-come visible. If the fabric has been dyed with a dye that has poor colorfastness, a definite dye ring will build up.

Another type of water spot in formed on fabrics that contain little or no sizing, but do contain finishing oils that are put in the yarns when the fabric is manufactured. An example of this type of water spotting may be encountered on some of the rayon and acetate crepe fabrics. Water has a swelling effect on some fibers-it can also have a shrinking action on them. In the combination crepes, you usually find that the water spotted area has a tendency to shrink up and look

TV Singer Says Men Have it Easy

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK P-Men performers have it much easier than women on television, says Georgia Gibbs, the girl who has launched a delightful new program of songs on NBC-TV Monday evenings

"A man just puts on a tux or a dark suit and goes before the cameras," she said. "But a woman has so many problems. What clothes will she wear? How will she fix her hair? Is her makeup right? It seems to me I spend three days a week fussing over my clothes for a 15-minute show."

Because of the care with which she selects her clothing ("I strive for simplicity"), viewers don't realize she is only five feet. But the home audience has discovered she can sing anything: ballads or blues, beguines or rock 'n' roll, and she can belt them or sing them sweet.

Georgia began singing in a Worcester. Mass., movie house when she was 11 years old, the youngest of four children of a widowed mother. Two years later she lied about her age and began touring with small bands, sometimes traveling 400 miles between one-night

"Those were the important years, when a kid wants to be wanted," she recalls. "On the road it was lonelier than it can ever be again. Those years are lost. But singing the way I did then-sometimes 50 or 60 songs a night-that's real solid training.

When she felt she was ready for the big plunge, she came to New York and competed with 150 other singers for a vocal spot on the Jimmy Durante radio show, landing the job. After that she appeared with such stars as Danny Kaye, Eddie Cantor, Bob Hope and Milton Berle. Her big break came with her 13th recording, "Kiss of Fire," which sold over a million. After that hit the offers for singing engagements poured in from clubs in both this country and Eu-

Film Actors Are Pikers In Earp Role

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD P - Ah, there's nothing like a busman's holiday -reading show biz tomes beside Balboa Bay

Most adventurous of my literary excursions was "Wyatt Earp, Frontier Marshal" by Stuart Lake. I wanted to see how much Hugh O'Brian and Burt Lancaster act like the famed marshal. Conclusion: Messrs. O'Brian and Lancaster are pikers compared to the real Earp.

What a gunfighter the guy was, udging from his recollections! And what iron in his final wish! Shortly before he died, Earp told Lake: "the greatest consolatior that I have in growing old is the hope that after I'm gone they'll grant me the peaceful obscurity I haven't been able to get
